The View from Nowhere Frank Brierley Thomas Nagel was 78 on 4th July this year. He is Emeritus Professor of Philosophy and Law at New York University, and in 1986 published his influential book, *The View from Nowhere*¹, which gives my talk both its title and its subject matter. The book's first objective view of the world that they claim to represent – what one might term, following Thomas Nagel (1986), the 'view from nowhere'. The key question is how this view is manufactured and mediated. This mirror-like viewpoint over territory is, in fact, spatially and temporally discontinuous: resolution and speci?ca-objective view means that each of us is what Nagel calls "an objective self", the subject of such a view, and this objective self, he argues, feels some resistance to the thought that it is part of the world which it views from nowhere. If Nagel's comments about the objective self were all of this kind, then talk of the
